Cockroach Infestation Control?

Cockroaches can be found infesting all types of buildings from blocks of flats to industrial premises, and particularly kitchen areas. They are nocturnal and spend the day hiding in cracks and crevices around such areas as sinks, drains, cookers, skirting boards, service ducts and fridge motor compartments.

APS Pest Control use the least toxic options to control cockroach infestation.

Cockroach Facts?

A cockroach is a pest often found in people's homes. The average adult cockroach is about 1/2" long, and smaller when young. It has a flattened, oval shape and long feelers. The most common kind in the Upper Midwest United States is the German cockroach, which is light brown with two black stripes behind its head. Cockroaches eat almost any kind of food, as well as household items like glue, leather, and book bindings.

Why are Cockroaches a Health Problem?

Cockroaches are an important health problem because they can smell bad, put germs in our food, and bring sickness such as food poisoning and diarrhea to your family. Some people are also allergic to cockroaches and may get asthma.
